Hello, Parents!

How to use this book

Tear out the page along the dashed line near the spine. Every activity is printed on its own page, so cutting one never ruins the next.

Color first, then cut

Coloring warms up the same small muscles cutting needs, and it gives your child something they made before the scissors come out.

Go at your child's pace

The five levels build up from single snips to cut-and-glue projects. Repeat a level as often as you like. There is no order to keep to, and a child who wants the same page four times is practising.

Stay close

Use child-safe scissors and supervise every session. Little hands tire quickly, so short and often beats one long sitting.
